UD OFFERS NEW MAJOR IN INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

DAYTON, Ohio, October 27, 1980 -- A major in international studies at the University of Dayton will be offered beginning next term. The new major is designed for students interested in careers in government service, in education, and in government affairs work with multi-national corporations.

Initially the major will embrace Europe and Latin America. Later, the program may include other areas as University offerings develop.

The curriculum of the major requires courses including, among others, economics, history, and political science. Also required is an intensive concentration focused on West Europe, East Europe, or Latin America. Each student in the program must also complete, in addition to elective courses, at least six hours of upper level foreign language (French, German, Italian, Russian, or Spanish).

Also recommended is overseas study with the Interdepartmental Study Abroad Program of the University's College of Arts and Sciences.

Almost all of the courses to be taken by majors in the new program are already offered at the University. Two new courses are being developed, however. "The Theory and Practice of Communism" will be offered by the Political Science Department. Also, "Contemporary Intellectual Trends" will be a six-hour, two-semester seminar examining European literature, philosophy, film, art, and music.

For more information on the program, contact Gordon Neufang (Department of Languages 229-2449) or Gerald Kerns (Political Science Department 229-3626).
